Amazing Zoo

The new zoo is finally open in Hong Kong. I am so excited because I am an animal lover! As my younger brother Matt's birthday is coming, my parents brought us to the zoo to have some fun. Matt was very happy as he has never been to a zoo before.

We arrived at the zoo at noon. As we were buying tickets at the entrance, we were told that each of us could get a sticker pack as a souvenir. Matt was walking on air when he heard about that. After getting our tickets, I wanted to see the elephants. But Mum suggested we should watch the bird show first as it was the only show that day.

When we were walking to the Bird Paradise, we heard a melodic piece of music from an ice cream car. Dad bought Matt and I an ice cream each. It was my favourite chocolate ice cream. Then we watched the bird show. I did not expect much from the show, but it was surprisingly good. I had no idea that birds could do lots of tricks. Some even solved mathematical problems. The audience uttered excited exclamations when the birds performed.

Let's take a look at that day's photos. The first one is the dim sum dishes we had as breakfast before going to the zoo. They were all delicious! Dad took the next photo of Matt and I feeding some bananas to an elephant after watching the bird show. Here is the last one, which I like most! It was taken at the entrance of our last stop, also my most memorable stop, the Penguin Land. In the photo, Mum is standing behind me and making a silly face. Dad is standing behind Matt and putting his thumb up. Both Matt and I are holding penguin dolls that Mum bought us. I like the doll so much! I hope we can go to the zoo again next time.
